I like the way programming allows me to turn my ideas into a working system, and I really enjoy the projects we do in the Computer Science units. I had to develop an AI that could play a card game. We got them to play against each other in a tournament and my AI was victorious. I want to develop an AI that is as smart as a human.

Agribusiness encompasses the entire food production process, from business activities involved in production, financing and processing to marketing of food and fibre in order to feed a growing population. This major will prepare you to apply business and economic principles to address global challenges in food security, farming systems and evolving consumer markets.

You'll learn to demonstrate fluency with the factors and conditions affecting the agricultural industry. Build practical and transferable skills in management, communication and leadership, and apply these skills toward the strategies needed to implement growth and sustainability in the agri-food and farming sectors. Apply skills and knowledge to real-world scenarios in agricultural planning, distribution and innovation.

Why study this course? • Build the knowledge and professional work skills you need to contribute solutions to issues of food security and global food production. • Explore different facets of the agricultural industry, such as international trade, business management, marketing, policy formation and more.
